

Globalizing Sport Studies Series

Series Editor: John Horne, Professor of Sport and Sociology
University of Central Lancashire

Public interest in sport studies continues to grow throughout the world. This series brings together the latest global empirical work in the field and acts as a knowledge hub for interdisciplinary work in sport studies. Whilst promoting work across disciplines, the series will focus on social scientific and cultural studies of sport. It will bring together the most innovative scholarly empirical and theoretical work, from within the UK and internationally. All publications will be published under Creative Commons licences.

It seeks to:

- Act as a knowledge hub for social scientific and cultural research in sport
- Contribute to the field of research by focussing on sport at regional, national and international levels.
- Create a series for researchers that will become synonymous with leading edge research, scholarly opportunities and academic development.
- Promote the latest theoretical and empirical work in the field.
- Provide an English language outlet for high quality non-English writing on sport in society.
- Publish innovative content simultaneously online and in print.
- Realise the potential for globalizing sport studies through open content licensing with Creative Commons.

The series has an International Advisory Board of world-renowned researchers in Sport and Comparative Studies. Current members include:

Jay Coakley, University of Colorado
Jean Harvey, University of Ottawa
Neil Lazarus, University of Warwick
Wolfram Manzenreiter, University of Vienna
Camilla Obel, University of Canterbury

Research monographs on the following areas will be included in the Globalizing Sport Studies series:

- Sport and global social movements
- Sport and global media
- Sport and social development
- Sport and global political economy
- Sports mega-events
- Social studies of science, technology and sport
- Sociological and cultural studies of sports
- Sport and social relations in non-western societies
- Sport and global social issues
